

A worksite assessment is an on-site assessment of a worker's duties and/or potential suitable duties.

A worksite assessment can be an effective tool in injury prevention and occupational rehabilitation. A worksite assessment is a valuable component of an injured workers return to work as the assessment will investigate options of adapting the workplace to the person or physical suitability of alternative suitable duties. Detailed results from a worksite assessment can greatly inform medical professionals and assist in sound decision making regarding medical certificate upgrades.

Employers can also use the assessment to ensure the workplace is equipped for new workers, people with disabilities or those with specific needs.
